Aid Boat Sinks in Myanmar

Loss of scarce supplies adds to 'epic' cyclone catastrophe

YANGON, MYANMAR | Myanmar's monumental task of feeding and sheltering 1.5 million cyclone survivors suffered yet another blow Sunday when a boat laden with relief supplies — one of the first international shipments — sank on its way to the disaster zone.

The death toll jumped to more than 28,000 and British Foreign Secretary David Miliband warned that "malign neglect" by the isolated nation's military rulers was creating a "humanitarian catastrophe of genuinely epic proportions."

The junta has been sharply criticized for its handling of the May 3 disaster, from failing to provide adequate warnings about the pending storm to responding slowly to offers of help.

Though international assistance has started trickling in, the few foreign relief workers who have been allowed in have been restricted to the largest city of Yangon. Only a handful have succeeded in getting past checkpoints into the worst-affected areas.

But in what was seen as a huge concession by the junta, the United States finally got the go-ahead to send a C-130 cargo plane packed with supplies to Yangon on Monday, with two more air shipments scheduled for Tuesday.

Myanmar's military rulers are deeply suspicious of Washington, which has long been one of the junta's biggest critics, pointing to human rights abuses and its failure to hand over power to a democratically elected government. (AP)

COINCIDENCE?

Pineapple-Shaped Cabin to Be Searched

The U.S. Forest Service is looking for the "SpongeBob fanatics" who painted the cartoon character on the chimney of a historic building. The 10-foot-tall painting of Nickelodeon character SpongeBob SquarePants is on a cabin in the Pike National Forest in Colorado that used to be the Forest Service's tree nursery until it was abandoned in the 1930s. Forest Service law enforcement officer Tom Healy says the incident is part of an increase in vandalism in the area. Healy says it will cost several thousand dollars to wipe the animated yellow sea sponge's image from the site. (AP)

BAD MANNERS

And THEN He Used The Wrong Fork!

The 55-year-old Omaha man who performed a tracheotomy on himself with a steak knife says he did the same thing to himself two years ago. Steve Wilder said Friday that his throat is shrunk because of radiation treatments for cancer. Those treatments ended four years ago, but scar tissue remains. Seasonal allergies caused his struggle to breathe overnight. "I didn't feel pain. I was just trying to survive," Wilder said. "I got relief right away. There was a big gush of blood, and I was able to start sucking in air." (AP)

Design of Ballots Still A Concern

Experts say little has been changed since the 2000 fiasco in Fla.

The solution should have been a no-brainer, voting experts say. After all, it was a badly designed ballot that inflamed the 2000 election meltdown and introduced the vagaries of chads to the political lexicon — pregnant, hanging and otherwise. It would seem that redesigning ballots to make them simpler should have been a high priority. But that hasn't been the case, voting experts say.

Eight years after the fiasco in Florida's Palm Beach County, confusing ballots continue to stymie voters and plague elections in this primary season.

One of the worst primary problems occurred in Los Angeles County, the nation's largest voting jurisdiction. On Feb. 5, many complained about a ballot eccentricity that required independent voters to fill in two ovals — one for a candidate and one for the party in which they were voting.

"The sad fact is, we still have not systematically addressed the need for good ballot design standards," said Lawrence Norden of New York University. "We're still seeing the same ballot design mistakes in almost every federal election." (AP)

3 Killed in Wis. Helicopter Crash

MADISON, WIS. | A medical helicopter dropped off a patient and then crashed shortly after it took off on its return flight to Madison, killing the surgeon, nurse and pilot on board, officials said Sunday.

ON THE ROPES: Hillary Clinton campaigns in West Virginia Sunday, even as she faced pressure to drop out of the campaign.

Confidence Betrays Clinton

Sense of inevitability could be the downfall of former front-runner

WASHINGTON | Hillary Rodham Clinton began her presidential quest armed with talent, tenacity, fame, money, connections and a team that knew how to win.

Many people believed her victory in the Democratic nomination battle was a sure thing. Her ultimate failing may have been in believing it, too.

Clinton had one big problem out of the gate: 40 percent or more of Americans said they'd never vote for her. She was too polarizing.

Clinton powered through that hurdle in state after state, showing grit that earned her the valuable political currency of being merely admired.

White men, blue-collar workers, socially conservative Democrats — however you slice the electorate, she brought many of those people to her side over time and took the edge off the Hillary haters.

Despite all that, her campaign is on the ropes. Clinton is fighting on for a prize few believe she can win anymore.

Clinton once said she is the most famous person no one knows, meaning Americans don't

Sixteen months after she opened her campaign sitting on a couch in a cozy online video, it's questionable whether people ever discovered the authentic Clinton.

Is she the whiskey-downing pit bull of Indiana? The near-tears softy of New Hampshire?

Even many of the New York senator's supporters thought she would say anything to win, or be anyone.

These are some of the paradoxes and missed opportunities that will be examined by the cottage industry sure to arise to explore the what-ifs of Clinton's campaign.

By now, it's common knowledge that she planned to wrap up the nomination in early February.

It was a reasonable assumption in 2007, but there wasn't much of a Plan B when that didn't work out in 2008.

"Her inevitability was based on a concept that no one would have the gumption or the resources or drive to get in — anyone with serious chances," Dick Harpootlian, a former South Carolina Democratic chairman and Barack Obama supporter, said after her Super Tuesday strategy fell short.

"They had an inevitability strategy, which was sort of a political Maginot line. It was illusionary. You just went around it, and, you know, Barack Obama did that."

Bush: Jenna's Wedding 'Spectacular'

President raves about ceremony the day after giving away daughter

WACO, TEXAS | President Bush spent months joking about being a father of the bride, but on Sunday he was downright wistful about giving his daughter Jenna away to her long-time beau.

"Our little girl Jenna married a really good guy, Henry Hager," Bush said at an airport in Waco where he boarded Air Force One for his flight back to Washington. "The wedding was spectacular. It's just — it's all we could have hoped for."

Unlike other first family weddings that have been broadcast live, the Bushes didn't share their daughter's nuptials with the nation. The day after, however, they briefly shared their joy.

"The weather cooperated nicely," Bush said about the wedding at his Texas ranch. "Just as the vows were exchanged, the sun set over our lake and it was just a special day and a wonderful day, and we're mighty blessed."

A reporter asked the president if he had been up late partying. Bush winked, then turned toward the plane, ignoring a second question about whether the wedding had given the slumping U.S. economy a boost. DEB RIECHMANN (AP)

Storms Kill More Than 20

Crews seek survivors after powerful system slams Ga., Mo., Okla.

PICHER, OKLA. | Crews and search dogs hunted Sunday for survivors or bodies in piles of debris after tornadoes and storms rumbled across the region a day earlier and killed at least 21 people in three states.

Six people died in Picher, once a bustling mining center of 20,000 that dwindled to about 800 people as families fled lead pollution there, and officials held out hope that they wouldn't find any more bodies.

Residents said the tornado created a surreal scene as it tore through town Saturday afternoon, injuring 150 people, overturning cars, damaging dozens of homes and throwing mattresses and twisted metal high into the canopy of trees.

"I swear I could see cars floating," said Herman Hernandez, 68. "And there was a roar, louder and louder."

The same storm system then moved into southwestern Missouri, where tornadoes killed at least 14 people. The system moved eastward; on Sunday, storms in Geor-

"The federal government will be moving hard to help," President Bush said. "I'll be in touch with the governors and offer all of the federal assistance we can."

In Seneca, Mo., about 20 miles southeast of Picher near the Oklahoma state line, crews on Sunday combed farm fields looking for bodies and survivors. Ten of the dead were killed when a twister struck near Seneca.

Nineteen people were hospitalized in Newton County, which includes Seneca, said Keith Stammer, acting spokesman for the county emergency operations. He did not know the extent of their injuries.

Jobseekers with Security Clearance Always in Demand

By Carol Sorgen

Despite the economic downturn and the muttered rumblings of the word "recession," jobseekers holding a security clearance still enjoy bright prospects, especially if they offer employers a skill set that combines soft skills with industry knowledge.

"The economy does have some impact on a job search, but there is always uncertainty in the marketplace," says Kathleen Smith, CMO of ClearedJobs.Net, a Northern Virginia-based firm that links security cleared jobseekers and employers with security cleared positions, both in the Washington metropolitan area and nationwide as well.

That said, there are always positions available, adds Smith, especially for security cleared professionals. That's because the number of people who hold a security clearance is still far lower than the number of cleared jobs available.

Of course, even if the odds are in your favor, a jobseeker needs to research the job market and types of positions available, have an effective resume, and network at functions such as ClearedJobs. Net monthly job fairs (the next fairs are scheduled for May 13 at the Tysons Corner Marriott, and May 14 at the BWI Marriott).

"Because we value the jobseeker's time, we survey each jobseeker to get his or her opinion of the job fair and of the companies involved," says Smith. We take this information to improve the event each time for the job seekers and share with the companies involved how they were received by the jobseekers in attendance. In addition to attending job fairs, jobseekers who hold a security clearance can take advantage of ClearedJobs.Net's suite of services offered at no charge, including job researching, resume writing, and resume posting, as well as other services such as newsletters and career coaching.

In a tight economy, it helps to offer employers more "bang for their buck," says Smith. You may have the technical skills needed to work, say, in the IT field, but what about your "soft skills," such as interpersonal skills, the ability to write and speak clearly, and customer-relationship building skills.

"Future IT leaders know they need these skills to ascend the ranks," says Smith, pointing out that the ability to manage up, build relationships, and understand business strategy were deemed critical for professional advancement in a survey of the winners of the 2008 "Ones to Watch" award, presented annually by CIO magazine and the CIO Executive Council, to recognize IT's rising stars and the CIOs who have nurtured them.

"If you have these soft skills or develop them, you will be able to maintain your success," agrees Patricia A. Frame, founder of Strategies for Human Resources in Alexandria. Frame is a regular presenter at ClearedJobs.Net job fairs; at the upcoming job fairs, she will offer a series of valuable seminars including "It's Just Talking: Job Fairs and Other Conversation Opportunities." Frame will also speak on "How to Work a Job Fair," "Interviewing to Succeed," and "Resume Tips and Tricks."

To find out if you have what employers are looking for in today's marketplace, says Frame, do your own personal soft skills/competencies audit:

- Which skills do you need in your current job?
- What do you know about the need?
- How would you evaluate yourself on each skill you need?
- How would your boss evaluate you on each?

Then assess the skills needed for other positions that interest you, says Frame. Look at position descriptions or job ads to consider both promotions within your current organization which interest you and external opportunities.

Once you have assessed your current competencies versus needed ones, develop a plan, Frame advises:

- Pick one competency you want to work on.
- Identify your goal and what steps are needed to achieve it. Keep the steps small but be specific.
- Put in a timeframe
- Identify how you will know you have achieved your goal. That is your measure of success.

Next, ask others for help. "Soft skills by their nature involve working with others, so you need others to help you develop yours," Frame suggests. Share your plan with your boss, a mentor, or a talented co-worker and ask for their assistance. Find a person who does well what you want to learn: model yourself after that individual and ask for his or her advice or assistance. You need feedback as you make changes and you need opportunities to practice your new ideas.

Resources you can tap, Frame recommends, include:

- educational, developmental, or training opportunities at your work or classes at local schools and colleges

- meetings or seminars on the topic held by professional groups
- volunteer activities
- developing and practicing these skills with a mentor or boss
- online courses followed by practice with a friend or co-worker
- books on the topic, followed by practice at work or in a volunteer group
- setting up your own group of co-workers or friends to learn and practice with.

Then it's time to practice, practice, practice. At first, you are likely to feel awkward or self-conscious as you apply your new knowledge at work or at home, Frame acknowledges. But you will notice that far more than others will. So tamp down your nervousness and plan to practice. Ask your co-workers, a mentor, or friend for feedback and specific information on what you did well and what still needs work. "Often keeping a record of what you have tried and what results you got will help you to keep going and to improve," Frame advises.

When you feel comfortable with your new skill, reward yourself, Frame suggests. Pick a reward. Then keep on using the new skill as needed.

Finally, tackle another area. "No, it never ends," says Frame. "Not if you want to succeed at work or in life."

Scientists Push for Amphibian Ark

Program aims to keep disappearing species in captivity, breed them

SCIENCE | The 300 Kihansi spray toads residing in a small room at the Bronx Zoo chirp cheerily as they bask in a light sprinkling of water 14 times per day. Until a few years ago, the tiny, mustard-colored toads existed only in a river gorge in Tanzania. Now the survivors are confined to the Bronx and Toledo zoos, having gone extinct in the wild.

With thousands of amphibian species facing unprecedented threats to their survival, scientists have launched a global effort to collect them in zoos in an attempt to save them from disappearing altogether. Named Amphibian Ark, the program aims to keep 500 species in captivity and breed enough to eventually reintroduce them into the wild. "In terms of scope, I think this is the biggest conservation project that humanity has ever tried to tackle," said Kevin Zippel, the program's director.

Scientists have been tracking the rapid disappearance of amphibians for two decades, but new evidence suggests the animals face increasingly grave peril. A third to a half of all amphibians are now threatened with extinction; 165 species have already vanished. In Latin America and the Caribbean, three of every four amphibian species are critically endangered.

In response, members of the Association of Zoos and Aquariums, along with other institutions worldwide, have declared 2008 the "Year of the Frog" in an initiative to raise the roughly $440 million needed to conduct research, maintain captive species and preserve critical habitat worldwide. "I don't think we're going to save everything we bring into captivity," said R. Andrew Odum, the Toledo Zoo's curator of herpetology, but "it's important that we try."

Serbian President Declares Victory

Pro-Western leader Tadic says he won parliamentary vote

BELGRADE, SERBIA | Serbia's pro-Western president declared victory in Sunday's parliamentary elections — a stunning upset over ultranationalists who tried to exploit anger over Kosovo's independence and thwart the nation's ambitions to join the European Union.

"This is a great day for Serbia," Boris Tadic proclaimed after an independent monitoring group that carried out a parallel vote count nationwide said his bloc won 39 percent — about 10 percent more than the ultranationalist Serbian Radical Party.

"The citizens of Serbia have confirmed Serbia's European path," he said. "Serbia will be in the European Union."

But Tadic said he wasn't celebrating because his rivals could still team up against his Coalition for a European Serbia and try to form Serbia's next government.

Tadic's opponents said their own tabulations confirmed Tadic's victory — an astonishing turnabout after speculation that the Radicals would sweep to power, together with Prime Minister Vojislav Kostunica's conservative coalition.

Fighting, Fears Spread in Lebanon

Sunni-Shiite clashes cease in Beirut but continue in mountains

BEIRUT, LEBANON | Lebanon hung between fears of all-out war and hopes of political compromise Sunday as government supporters and opponents battled with rockets and machine guns in the mountains overlooking the capital.

The fighting saw the collapse of pro-government forces in the Aley region, a stronghold of anti-Syrian Druse leader Walid Jumblatt.

Beirut was quiet a day after

Friends of a man killed by Shiite gunmen carry his coffin Sunday in Beirut.

Hezbollah gunmen left the streets, heeding an army call for the Shiite fighters to clear out.

The city was the focus of four days of Sunni-Shiite clashes that culminated with Hezbollah's seizing large swaths of Muslim West Beirut — demonstrating its military might in a showdown with the government.

Thirty-eight people have been killed since Wednesday, when a power struggle between the Hezbollah-led opposition and the U.S.-backed government began erupting into the worst sectarian violence since Lebanon's 1975-1990 civil war. Across the country, there were fears of another slide into civil war. ZEINA KARAM (AP)

Hamas Shuts Off Gaza Power

GAZA CITY, GAZA STRIP | Gaza City residents faced closed bakeries, stalled elevators and no water on Sunday after the ruling Hamas shut down the territory's only power plant, saying it ran out of fuel supplied by Israel.

Israel charged that Hamas was creating an artificial crisis, raising tensions ahead of a visit by an Egyptian mediator trying to broker a truce between the two enemies.

On Sunday, Gaza militants fired three rockets at Israel, including one that exploded next to a school bus. No one was hurt. (AP)

Gunmen leave, shops reopen as cease-fire begins in Sadr City

BAGHDAD | The U.S. military expressed hope Sunday for a diplomatic solution to seven weeks of fighting in Baghdad's Sadr City as a cease-fire settled over the Shiite slum that houses nearly half the capital's 6 million people.

No violence was reported as gunmen withdrew and shops reopened on the first day of the cease-fire brokered by Shiite lawmakers and representatives of Muqtada al-Sadr's

"We're doing limited operations in Sadr City as this implementation process takes place," said U.S. military spokesman Rear Adm. Patrick Driscoll. He warned that a truce had not yet been brokered and that the Iraqi government and Shiite representatives were still talking.

"It is an ongoing dialogue process," Driscoll said. "It is premature to say there is an agreed-to truce."

Official: Runoff In Zimbabwe Will Be Delayed

HARARE, ZIMBABWE | The runoff pitting President Robert Mugabe against opposition leader Morgan Tsvangirai will not take place in the next few weeks, an official said in an interview published Sunday.

Tsvangirai had announced over the weekend that he would participate in a runoff — but insisted the vote be held within 21 days of the May 2 announcement of results from the first vote. Yet, the chairman of the Zimbabwe Electoral Commission said government officials need more time to prepare. (AP)

Joan Morris DiMicco, left, and Werner Geyer use Beehive, an online portal through which IBM employees can describe their areas of expertise and build camaraderie.

FAST FORWARD

I just had FiOS installed (TV, Internet and phone). What security should I set up with the provided wireless router so I can use wireless with my work laptop?

This advice goes for any wireless router: 1) Change the router's administrative password from the default. This way, a stranger can't hop on your network and then reconfigure the network at will. 2) If you don't want to share your Internet access with neighbors, enable encryption on your home network. Choose WPA, not WEP, for this encryption.

If you don't want to share your Internet access with neighbors, enable encryption on your home network.

I hope this is not a forbidden question, but where can I purchase past versions of software? I don't need the most current version of an office productivity product.

You can try eBay. But why not just use the free, open-source OpenOffice? That won't cost a thing — and it doesn't have that talking paperclip to annoy you.

What do you think — does Apple have a security problem?

That particular vulnerability has been fixed; Apple released an update to Safari last month that fixes the flaw exploited in that CanSecWest contest. In the broader sense: Yes, Apple has a security problem in that it needs to stay on top of security threats to all of the Internet-facing software it ships — most of which (Safari, iTunes, QuickTime) runs on Windows as well as OS X.

fulness reflects the fact that Beehive is meant to encourage far-flung co-workers to like each other more.

Beehive is an online portal for employees to describe their expertise, so valuable knowledge doesn't get lost inside the bureaucracy.

Those kinds of tools are common, but Beehive adds an unusual dose of Facebook or MySpace.

The 27,000 IBMers using Beehive can post pictures, video and one-sentence updates about themselves. They can share lists of "things I can't live without."

Such personal touches often are missing when people work at a distance from one another, says Joan Morris DiMicco, an IBM researcher developing Beehive.

Co-workers in different locales can't wander into each other's offices and see family pictures on the desk. They don't shop at the same places or have children in the same schools.

These tidbits, DiMicco believes, help people understand each other better. And the usual communication tools like e-mail, instant messaging, phones and even videoconferencing do only so much to fill the gap.

New software helps distant colleagues develop camaraderie

FACE SPACE | Once upon a time, people bonded with their co-workers on office softball teams and traded gossip at the watercooler.

OK, so those days aren't gone yet. But as big companies parcel Information Age work to people in widely dispersed locations, it's getting harder for colleagues to develop the camaraderie that comes from being in the same place. Beyond making work less fun, feeling disconnected from comrades might be a drag on productivity.

Now technology researchers are trying to replicate old-fashioned office interactions by transforming everyday business software for the new era of work. The historically dry-as-sawdust products are borrowing elements from video games and social-networking Web sites.

You can tell just from looking at the Beehive program under development at IBM Corp. that something is different. Beehive's color scheme is bright yellow, not IBM's standard blue. The cheer-

Costs May Fuel Shorter Vacations

Gas prices could lead people to stay closer to home this summer

OCEAN CITY, MD. | Mid-Atlantic resorts are hoping gas prices spiraling toward $4 per gallon and a cooling economy won't keep vacationers at home this summer — but they're bracing for shorter stays and less spending on restaurants and entertainment while people vacation.

"People are staying less time," said innkeeper Vicki Barrett, who runs a six-room bed and breakfast in Ocean City. "They're not staying for five days or seven days — they're staying for two days or three days."

Along the beaches of Maryland and Delaware, and at other resorts that rely on summertime traffic, this summer is a big question. Some say business will go down as people cut vacation spending, while others are hoping the weak dollar and high gas prices will keep summer travelers closer to home.

Maryland tourism officials say they're targeting more vacationers from neighboring states such as West Virginia and Pennsylvania this year. The theme of some ads going up this summer: "Pretty. Close."

"They always come out with these reports that when gas hits X, people will stop traveling. We just don't see that," said Margot Amelia, executive director of the Maryland Office of Tourism.

Amelia predicted that Mid-Atlantic resorts would benefit if anyone changes travel plans, because the region will look more attractive than trekking to Florida or the Carolinas for a beach trip. "It's probably those long-haul trips that will go. People will travel two hours from home, and that bodes very well for us," she said.

Local groups such as the Manassas Ballet Theatre and the Prince William Symphony Orchestra are expected to use center. (AP)

Zoo: Fire Systems Inadequate

The 2006 blaze at the National Zoo began when a corroded aquarium lamp sparked in the Invertebrate House and started an electrical fire. The smoke was intense, but the flames were quickly discovered, staff was evacuated, and creatures in the building perished.

When zoo officials looked into the circumstances, however, they found, to their dismay, that the house's recently tested smoke alarms failed to activate. Further investigation showed that other fire protection systems across the zoo complex were also inadequate, and, in most cases, nonexistent.

In the aftermath of that fire, zoo employees are immersed in a multi-year program to upgrade the zoo's fire systems, in order to enhance fire detection and suppression, and smoke evacuation.

Only 11 of the zoo's 87 buildings have fully equipped sprinkler systems, and many can't be operated because of inadequate water main pressure.

Jazz shuts down Kobe and the Lakers to win easily in extra time

NBA PLAYOFFS | Andrei Kirilenko blocked Kobe Bryant twice in overtime and converted a three-point play with 35 seconds remaining as the Jazz beat the Lakers 123-115 on Sunday, tying the Western Conference semifinals at 2-2.

The Jazz went 9-for-9 from the foul line in overtime and outscored the Lakers 15-7 in the extra 5 minutes.

Deron Williams had 29 points and 14 assists, while Carlos Boozer scored 12 of his 14 points in the second half and grabbed 12 rebounds. Mehmet Okur added 18 points and 11 rebounds, and Kirilenko finished with 15 points and five blocks — stuffing Bryant twice as the Lakers tried to rally in overtime.

Bryant finished with 33 points and 10 assists.

Celtics Still Searching for a Road Win

Boston was the NBA's best away team but is 0-4 in the playoffs

NBA PLAYOFFS | Kevin Garnett stutter-stepped as he reached a potential right turn down a seemingly endless hallway early Sunday morning. After losing Game 3, he and Boston teammate Paul Pierce were on their way to a media interview room proving difficult to find.

"Where's it at?" Garnett growled.

That's the Celtics, searching for directions on the NBA's play-

Kevin Garnett's Celtics were 31-10 this season but are 0-4 in the playoffs so far.

off highway.

The kings of the road are lost.

Boston, which went a league-best 31-10 in away games during the regular season, has dropped all four of its road games so far in this postseason, a potentially disturbing trend for a team aiming to win it all. A perfect 6-0 inside noisy TD Banknorth Garden so far in these playoffs, the Celtics dropped to 0-4 on the road Saturday night with a 108-84 loss to the Cleveland Cavaliers, who trimmed Boston's lead to 2-1 in the best-of-seven series.

Game 4 is Monday night, and unless the green-and-white can cure their home sickness, their commanding lead will be gone.

Of course, holding the home-court advantage trump card throughout the playoffs gives the Celtics a safety net. They can continue to lose on the road as long as they win all their home games. But one little misstep on their parquet floor could lead to an early slide into summer.

"We can't spot a team 15-20 points and try to dig ourselves out of it," Garnett said. "We talked about that in the locker room, that we need to play with the same urgency like we have at home. We can definitely play better, and we will."

Garcia makes par putt on 18 to extend match, then wins in a playoff

GOLF | Sergio Garcia, the best player without a major, got the next best thing Sunday.

Garcia ended the longest victory drought of his career by making a clutch par putt to force a playoff and hitting the island-green 17th on the first extra hole to defeat Paul Goydos in The Players Championship.

Haunted by putting problems that kept him without a victory the past three years and 53 PGA Tour events, Garcia came up with a 45-foot birdie on the 14th to get back in the game and a 7-foot par putt on the 18th hole for a 1-under 71.

group, missed a 15-foot par putt on the last hole for the win.

It was the first playoff at The Players since 1987. The shot was only 128 yards, but it was in wind that blasted 30 mph throughout the day, to a green surrounded by water.

What a bad coincidence for Goydos — he was the first to hit into the water when the tournament began Thursday and the last player to go into the water at the worst time.

"It's been a lot of work," Garcia said, clutching the crystal trophy. "It feels like the last three years I've been playing well. Unfortunately, I haven't been able to come around and win. This week, I played so nicely. It felt like everything was so hard. I'm just thrilled the week is over and I managed to finish on top." DOUG FERGUSON (AP)

Uggla Lifts Florida to Sweep of Nats

Marlins slugger hits 2 homers; one caps 8th-inning comeback

NATIONALS | Dan Uggla's second home run on Sunday was a go-ahead drive in the eighth inning that lifted the Florida Marlins to their seventh straight win, a 5-4 victory over the Washington Nationals.

Uggla drove in two runs and has seven RBI and three homers in two games; he hit a grand slam Saturday and has 11 homers this season.

The Marlins have won all six of their games at Nationals Park, which opened this season, and their seven-game win streak overall is their best run since winning nine straight in August 2006.

Washington's Aaron Boone had a homer, triple and single with two RBI in the loss, the fifth for the Nats in the last six games.

Logan Kensing (2-0) pitched a scoreless seventh inning for the win, and Kevin Gregg pitched the ninth for his seventh save in eight chances.

Luis Ayala (1-3) gave up three runs on two homers in the eighth inning, spoiling Shawn Hill's solid outing.

Hill allowed two runs on five hits and struck out three in seven innings but got a no-decision for the fifth time in five starts this season. (AP)

Are You a Parent With Bipolar Disorder?

You and your children could help us learn more about bipolar disorder.

The National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) is seeking children of parents with bipolar disorder for a research study of people who, compared to others, have an increased chance of getting bipolar disorder. We can learn from both children who are doing well or having problems. There is no treatment in this outpatient study at the NIH Clinical Center in Bethesda, MD.

Participants must:

- Be between 8-17 years old
- Have a parent with bipolar disorder
- Be medically healthy

Thorough evaluation provided free of charge. Transportation assistance and compensation available for participation.

Please call: 301-496-8381 (TTY: 1-866-411-1010)

GONE: Big Brown ran away with the Derby, beating Eight Belles by 4 3/4 lengths.

11 New Horses Get A Shot at Brown

None of the other 19 Derby runners will stay in for Preakness

HORSE RACING | Big Brown was so overpowering in winning the Kentucky Derby, none of the 19 rivals he dusted off is showing up for another try in the Preakness Stakes.

The last time just the Derby winner moved on to the Preakness was 60 years ago, when Citation won the 1948 Derby — then took the Preakness and Belmont Stakes and became thoroughbred racing's eighth of 11 Triple Crown champions.

Unlike the '48 Preakness, when Citation beat only three opponents, Big Brown could face 11 3-year-olds from all parts of the country — Giant Moon from New York, Hey Byrn from Florida and Yankee Bravo from California, to name a few.

So, if Big Brown easily handled most of the leading 3-year-olds in the Derby, why are so many others lining up for what appears to be a mismatch?

The simple explanation comes from Richard Schosberg, who trains Giant Moon. "They still have to go around once," he said.

Reade Baker, the trainer of Preakness starter Kentucky Bear, said Big Brown could be vulnerable based on a short turnaround, especially after a peak performance at 1 1/4 miles, the longest distance most 3-year-olds will ever run.

"The wise guys would say he's going to bounce," Baker said. "How come he can't bounce now?"

BOY BAND PLUS ONE: Grace Potter and the Nocturnals are the little band out of Vermont that is slowly proving that it can.

Merry Potter

Rock 'n' roll's newest frontchick of note has a lot to smile about

MAKING IT | The pastoral landscape of Vermont yields great skiing and good cheese, but apparently it also lends itself to rock 'n' roll. Case in point: Grace Potter and the Nocturnals.

Potter and her band have earned their stripes primarily on the road, hitting the stages of festivals and clubs regularly, but they released a debut album, "This Is Somewhere," in 2007. Using both acoustics and electrics, organs, pianos and a mic, Potter has established herself as an able, magnetic frontwoman in a rock landscape where many female songwriters struggle to earn artistic and commercial success. This summer, Potter and the Nocturnals will play select dates opening for the Dave Matthews Band.

Potter sat down with Billboard.com to talk about the album, newfound recognition for her work and more.

What were your expectations while you were recording and releasing "This Is Somewhere," and how has the album exceeded them?

We were really committed to making the kind of record that would go beyond just the basic "throw-back sound." As much as we love and pull from classic rock, those records have been made already, and they were great the first time around. This was an opportunity to make our own sound.

Why is "This Is Somewhere" more pop-driven than your previous albums?

Our other records were all done in a matter of days with lots of unfinished ideas, but we took a lot more time preparing for this one. We just started writing songs that had a beginning, middle and end. I guess that's pop.

How does it feel to suddenly gain all of this recognition when you've been making records and touring for years?

It's funny when people come up to me and say, "Wow, you're an overnight success!" It makes me want to say, "Have you been asleep for five years?" But I don't. To me, we've been succeeding on a small level since the very beginning, and that's good enough for me.

How do you feel when the press compares you to other female singer/songwriters such as Norah Jones and Sheryl Crow?

When people see a talented girl, it calls to mind the very rare breed of women who have succeeded. If I were a dude with the same voice, I doubt they'd compare me to Sheryl Crow. But I'm not complaining. Big fish, small pond. KATIE HASTY (BILLBOARD)

PETER CASE

Gift to be Simple

2 Beautiful acoustic guitar and a gravelly but strong voice are what Peter Case is about at the moment, although he's been about a number of different genres and sounds over his lengthy career. There's been new wave, there's been a tinge of punk, but we think he's best in his pure acoustic performance mode. Check out this undeniable, seasoned talent tonight at Iota.

In Craig David We Still Trust

His new album might be a wee bit muddled, but it's a solid listen

MUSIC | "Trust Me" isn't just the title of British artist Craig David's fourth studio album. The two-word combination might best serve as instructions for listening to the disc.

The 26-year-old, who made a splash in the United States with his 2001 platinum debut "Born to Do It" but then fell off the radar here, exudes soul. His voice is sweet and sincere on the delicate, slow-moving track "Awkward," with its earthy mix of guitar and organ.

But creatively, David isn't so easily labeled. Perhaps it's because he escapes the usual boundaries of those in his musical genre — going full-throttle with sounds some artists only dabble in.

The tempo, the drums and the electrifying horns on "6 of 1 Thing" and "Don't Play with Our Love" boast Cuban influence. The lead single "Hot Stuff (Let's Dance)" starts with a '50s-era drumbeat and continues with a sound culled from the days of disco.

There are tracks, such as the folksy "Top of the Hill," that might seem out of character, but the guy sounds good, nevertheless. For those who choose to follow David's directions, "Trust Me" is easy to enjoy, even if the selection of tracks doesn't mesh seamlessly together.

Ben Barnes' Unfamiliar Face

A newcomer takes on Caspian in the next 'Narnia' installment

FRESH PRINCE | The biggest star to be seen around town these days is Ben Barnes.

Los Angeles motorists can't help but notice the handsome actor thrusting forward a sword from billboards plastered throughout the city. His image even covers the side of an eight-story office building along the famed Sunset Strip.

If his name doesn't sound familiar, it soon will, as the sequel to the 2005 fantasy-adventure "The Chronicles of Narnia: The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe" hits theaters.

The British actor stars as the title character in "The Chronicles of Narnia: Prince Caspian," which picks up where the first one left off.

"Prince Caspian" is based on the second installment of the popular

The makers of "Prince Caspian" tried to avoid using a well-known film star.

C.S. Lewis children's book series (seven in all). The stories revolve around a magical land inhabited by extraordinary people, talking animals and magical creatures.

Just a few years ago, Barnes was a little-known London actor. A casting agent spotted him in the revival of Alan Bennett's "The History Boys" and invited him to submit an audition tape to "Narnia" director Andrew Adamson.

In Barnes, the filmmakers saw the charisma and vulnerability they were looking for in their leading man. "He's very charming, and he looked good for the part," says Adamson.

But casting an unknown for a major motion picture franchise?

"It never occurred to us to cast a 'name,'" recalls Johnson, an Academy Award-winning producer ("Rain Man") who also produced the previous "Narnia." "Part of the excitement about it was discovering a Caspian and having that actor be Caspian, as opposed to bringing in a movie star and saying, 'so-and-so is Prince Caspian.'" ANGELA DAWSON

ROAD TO JUSTICE: Tillman appeared on the "Today" show to promote her book.

Words of Love and Of Loss

A mother documents the life and death of her son Pat Tillman

HEARTBREAK | Mary Tillman's beautifully written new book, "Boots on the Ground by Dusk: My Tribute to Pat Tillman," is a both a moving portrait of her son's tragically short life and an indictment of a military and government that misinformed her about the cause of the Army Ranger's death.

"Boots on the Ground" shifts between touching vignettes about Pat's youth and rise to fame as an NFL football player to sad accounts on how his family struggled with grief and with a bureaucracy seemingly determined to obscure how and why Pat died.

In the wake of Sept. 11, Pat signed up for the military with his brother Kevin, a minor-league baseball player. After Pat was killed in Afghanistan on April 22, 2004, his family and the public were told that he'd been shot while heroically battling the enemy.

About a month later, the truth emerged: He was shot by another Ranger.

In his mother's account, the family is told so many different stories

readexpress.com

For more of our conversation with mother, author and activist Mary Tillman, visit readexpress.com/entertainment.php about how Pat died that it becomes impossible to determine what happened that day. In the end, Mary believes "Pat was killed in a senseless act by soldiers who were wildly and inexplicably out of control." But she leaves open the possibility that he was murdered. The one thing clear to Mary Tillman is that the U.S. army and government intentionally misled the American public. "Pat's death was not thoroughly investigated," Tillman said. "I think it was prompted by the [Bush] administration — they were prompted to cover it up."

"They never really found out what Pat did out there," Mary continued. "They made up a story before they found out what his actions were. His uniform was destroyed, his equipment was destroyed — it was not sent back to show to the medical examiner. All these things are acts of disrespect. I don't think any soldier believes that will happen. They know there is a possibility of death, being wounded — but they don't expect the government to disrespect their service."

Tillman will further discuss her book and her son via a live chat on washingtonpost.com at noon on Monday and in a reading Monday evening at Olsson's in Penn Quarter. TIM FOLLOS

Cigarette Smoker? Want to Quit? Give Research a Try! (financial compensation is available) Stamped copy on file with IRB: 26 January 2007

The Center for Health Behavior Research under the direction of Dr. Elbert Glover, PhD, is conducting a research study testing an already FDA approved medication (not yet approved for smoking cessation) which may also help people stop smoking.

To participate you must:

• Be highly motivated to quit

• Be over 18 years of age

• Smoked daily for the past five years

• Attend 12 office visits over a 6 month period

Participants will receive at no cost:

• Physical exams and laboratory assessments

• Individual counseling

• FDA approved medication or placebo (50:50 chance of receiving the drug)

To Enroll Call Jessica Rath, PhD (301) 405-0128 Today!

This study is being funded by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, National Institutes of Health

'Sex and the City' fans flock to New York City for the film's opening

Forget the Empire State Building. Some New York tourists are eager to see the city's other landmarks: Carrie's stoop, Charlotte's gallery and that restaurant where Samantha threw a martini in a boyfriend's face.

Fans of "Sex and the City" have long arrived here eager to see the $500 shoes, the cosmopolitan-drinking fashionistas and the glamorous serial daters for themselves. Now, with the movie follow-up to the show set to premiere later this month, a number of them are planning trips so that they can see "Sex and the City" in the city.

"Once we found out there was going to be a movie, we thought 'What a great weekend to do a girls' trip to New York City, the weekend of the premiere,'" said Amy Walker, a 31-year-old accountant from Minneapolis who says she has watched the entire series twice on DVD.

Along with three female friends, she's planning to relax at a spa mentioned on the show, take a "Sex and the City Hotspots" tour and see the movie on its opening weekend.

"The producers have said that New York City is the fifth lady of the show," says Lisa Blythe Perlman, a guide for the "Hotspots" tour. "Eighty percent of the show was filmed on location."

Perlman and her colleagues bus about 1,000 tourists per week to see Carrie's stoop, check out her favorite sex-toy shop, sample her signature cocktail and eat the same cupcakes that they first spotted on the show. The tour company says it has already seen advance purchases more than double for the May 30 opening weekend.

"'Sex and the City' has been one of the all-time great commercials for the city of New York," says George Fertitta, who heads NYC & Company, the city's tourism office. "There's all of the fabric and the texture and the vibrancy of New York. ... It shows everything: from a great shopping component to a nightlife component, to a restaurant component."

Fertitta, who peppers his conversations with journalists with mentions of the show, said he was surprised on a recent visit to China when he found himself flooded by questions from local female reporters about the series.

"They look at this as a window into New York City," he said.

With its glossy shoots at parks, restaurants, nightclubs and shops across the city, the series has been something of an international ambassador for New York, showing in more than 200 countries around the world, according to HBO. About one-third of "Sex and the City Hotspots" tour-goers are from outside the United States, says On Location Tours spokeswoman Cathy Epstein.

The city is looking to capitalize on that interest. NYC & Company is launching a Web site to help visitors plan a "Sex and the City"-themed visit, and is organizing sweepstakes for such trips in Australia, Canada, France, Germany, Britain and across the United States. On Location Tours is offering an opening-night package that includes its "Hotspots" tour, the movie and a cocktail party.

One company is charging visitors $15,000 and up for a luxurious four-day trip based on the show. Participants in the Destination on Location tour, launching the weekend the movie opens, will dine at restaurants frequented by Carrie and her friends, visit their favorite boutiques with personal stylists and even have the option to stop for some Botox injections.

Although their visit will be less extravagant, Walker and her three friends are also planning to walk in the footsteps of Carrie, Miranda, Samantha and Charlotte.

"There definitely will be some shoe shopping," she said of their upcoming getaway. "Minneapolis has the Mall of America, but it's nothinglikeSoHo." SAMANTHA GROSS (AP)

Social networking sites can take the fun out of real reunions

Ten years after graduating from Taylor High School in Katy, Texas, Tina Lee Naro learned some surprising things about her former classmates. One committed atheist became a Mormon. A tightly wound “business school” type became a laid-back bartender at a Montana ski resort. And a formerly hirsute friend is now completely bald.

Naro, now a consultant in New York City, learned all these things not in person, but on the social networking site Facebook. She now plans to skip her 10-year reunion in September.

“I already had all those reunion moments: ‘Really? You’re gay? You’re married? You joined the military?’” she said. “Actually, going back to Katy holds a lot less appeal now.”

Sites like Facebook and MySpace

Kelly Huang has reconnected with friends from high school through Facebook.

are now competition for the class reunion — that time-honored tradition of dressing to kill, choking down rubbery chicken and gossiping about old classmates.

Many far-flung graduates say the ease of exchanging pictures and memories online makes it difficult to justify expensive trips home.

The idea resonated so deeply

“It was overwhelming, this feeling of running into everyone I’d ever known.”

CHRIS FARMER, FACEBOOK USER

with Chris Farmer of Vancouver, B.C., that he created a Facebook group titled “Facebook Has Eliminated the Need for a High School Reunion.”

When he signed up for Facebook, Farmer was flooded with messages from high school classmates: jocks, nerds, popular kids, even people he was pretty sure he’d never spoken to before.

“It was overwhelming, this feeling of running into everyone I’d ever known,” he said.

Farmer quickly sorted out what he calls “the good stuff” — which former party girl now teaches Sunday school, who gained or lost 200 pounds, which high school sweethearts broke up spectacularly, and which ones went on to get married and have kids. But after reconnecting, “seeing people in real life seemed a little pointless,” Farmer said.

At first, the 45 members of Farmer’s Facebook group — all classmates from Hapnot Collegiate High School in Flin Flon, Manitoba — agreed with him.

But then, almost disproving his point, the online discussions evolved into a decision to have an in-person reunion in “the Flon” after all, complete with one member offering to bring “fatty pics of Farmer” as a conversation piece.

Indeed, for every Facebooker reluctant to go off-line, it seems there are two who end up with an increased desire for face-to-face interaction — especially among younger grads, who are already spending tons of time online.

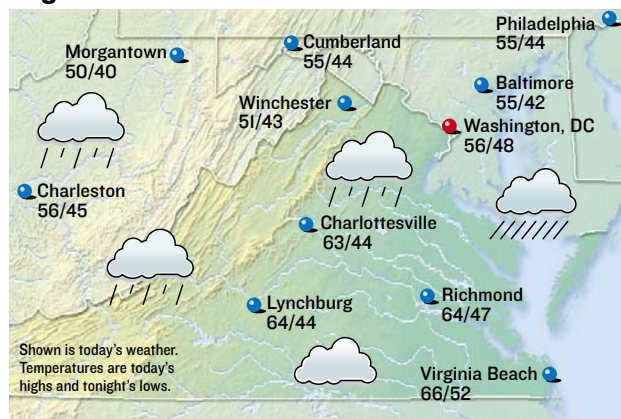

At Harvard University, where Facebook began, the class of 2003 is using Facebook to help plan its five-year reunion in June, said Jennifer Halloran, assistant director for classes and reunions at Harvard’s Alumni Association.

“Their Facebook reunion group has 770 members, or about half of their graduating class,” she said. “They’re using Facebook as a marketing tool and to get people excited to come back.” EMILY ZEUGNER (AP)

Scents of the Season

Smell your best this spring with a little spritz of fragrance

Gardenias and woody florals are among the favorite notes of perfumers these days, as are scents that add a bit of masculinity to an otherwise classic female fragrance.

The purposeful clashing of manly and womanly smells probably can be traced to Thierry Mugler's Angel, says Luca Turin, a scholar in olfactory science. "It was a 5 o'clock shadow and chest hair on a floral with a touch of vanilla," Turin says.

Turin and Tania Sanchez, a perfume collector and reviewer, reviewed more than 1,500 perfumes and colognes for their book "Perfumes: The Guide" (Viking, 2008).

"Florals never really go away. We've seen a number of gardenias — which is rather unusual — but at least they smell like gardenias this time," Sanchez says.

Turin says the interest in fresh, woody, transparent florals started in the niche fragrance market and has now gone mainstream. Here's a new scent sampling:

VERY IRRESISTIBLE GIVENCHY SUMMER COCKTAIL

With notes of star anise and crushed mint leaf, it's intended for sun-drenched skin. There's a companion men's fragrance.

HANAE MORI BUTTERFLY EAU FRAICHE This is Hanae Mori's lightest formula, thanks to citrus scents of tangerine and grapefruit added to the traditional berry and woody notes.

RALPH LAUREN ROMANCE EAU FRAICHE Eau Fraiche is a limited edition for summer getaways. It's a tweak to the original Romance with notes of lotus flower, guava and waterlily.

DREAMING BY TOMMY HILFIGER Dreams are a product of imagination and creativity, says Hilfiger. The scents include peach, white flower petals and white woods.

HERMES' UN JARDIN APRES LA MOUSSON Kerala, India, is a place where land and sea merge, and it inspires this floral-spicy concoction intended as a unisex fragrance. It favors green notes and watery ones, and cool spices like coriander.

MICHAEL KORS' ISLAND CAPRI

Sold as part of a trio with the reintroduced Island Fiji and Island Hawaii perfumes, Capri uses basil, bergamot, cypress and jasmine blossom.

VERA WANG BOUQUET

The bride serves as the designer's muse here. She imagines a lush bouquet with paperwhite narcissus and lavender with dew drops.

CHLOE

Three stars are used to embody the new signature scent: actresses Chloe Sevigny and Clemence Poesy, and model Anja Rubik. Self-assurance, irreverence and elegance are translated into notes of powder, peony, lychee and freesia. SAMANTHA CRITCHELL (AP)

Beauty

The Answer to Life

Let's be honest. You already own mascara. Sure, you always want more, but you want new mascara if it does something spectacular to your lashes. PHYSICIANS FORMULA PLUMP POTION ($9, drugstores) claims to have a "7x plumping effect." Never mind that lashes actually cannot be "plumped."

The bottle resembles a test tube, but don't let that fool you into thinking that you'll get your regular lashes, multiplied by exactly seven. You'll get thicker Pat Benatar-like lashes, yes, exactly like every other mascara. This one is rather clump-free, but the brush is bulky and awkward. Life is full of trade-offs. Don't forget that.

Say It, Don't Spray It

Finding a new perfume can be intimidating at best and nauseating at worst. But Sephora's new SCENTSA FRAGRANCE FINDER (Tysons Corner Center and Georgetown stores) makes it that much easier to avoid sensory overload. Its new touch-pad screens provide easily accessible information on anything you could ever imagine about perfume. DANIELLE PARNASS

The TV Column

Post TV columnist LISA DE MORAES was online Friday to theorize about “American Idol” contestant David Cook, rave over Bette Davis movies and reflect upon the return of “The Mole.”

I figured out how Syesha [on “American Idol”] lasted so long. This year, for the first time in a few seasons at least, there wasn't a group of three or four power divas in the final 12 to split the vote! I predict David Cook is gone next week. He's the best one left, so it wouldn't be fair to end his career by making the top two.

I'm surprised he didn't screw up worse this week to make sure he got cut. I mean, he messed up pretty badly, but he couldn't compete with Jason Castro, the maestro of messing up. Really, no rocker worth his salt — and what does THAT mean, anyway? — wants to actually win “American Idol.”

“Now, Voyager” will be on “The Essentials” on Turner Classic Movies tomorrow. Will you be watching?

Duh! Even though I saw it a couple weeks ago on a big screen at the Aero Theatre in Santa Monica as part of its Bette Davis festival. Imagine: a double feature, “Now Voyager” and “Dark Victory.” I wept buckets for two hours. It was brilliant. Nobody did melodrama like Bette Davis.

I was watching “Lost” Thursday night and saw an ad for the series premiere of “The Mole.” Does ABC think we're idiots with no memory? Yes, it appears they think we're idiots. I think we should begin mailing them thousands of moles with notes attached to collars around their little necks, saying “Remember Anderson Cooper!”

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your hopes are likely to be fulfilled before the day is out — but remember, there are more where those came from.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Difficulties are likely to arise between you and a Virgo or Libra native — especially one with whom you have disagreed in the past.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Disagreement must be avoided at all costs. Gather your forces and be on the march as soon as you can: This way, victory sits at your heels.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't be afraid of doing things your own way, even when the opposition chooses to be more vocal than usual. Trust your instincts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Protect yourself from foreseeable dangers, and don't let yourself become careless as you wade through uncharted waters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You'll have every reason to consider things in a new and imaginative manner. You may have to reinvent the wheel before day's end.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You have a great deal to offer those around you, and you mustn't be bashful about speaking your mind when you have the opportunity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You're expecting someone to back you 100 percent, but the fact is that your own actions will speak louder than anyone else's words.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A new opportunity may come knocking on your door, but you might not be ready to take full advantage of it just yet.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) It may not be possible for you to honor all your commitments — and you can be sure that those who take a rain check do expect satisfaction.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Today is a good day to indulge a hobby of sorts — but you must take care that you're not letting more central issues slide as a result.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may have to explain yourself more than once — and you must do so clearly, directly and without any self-consciousness at all.
